Protecting Your Privacy: SankalpSiksha Online Safety Guide

Some websites, products and services may allow you to communicate with other users through forums, chat, and other messaging services. In order to protect your privacy and keep safe whenever online, SankalpSiksha recommends the following:

Don't share your password - ever. No employee from SankalpSiksha will ever ask for your password.

Don't give out your name, or give out your address, email address, school, or any other personal information if you are under 18. If you are over 18 use caution when posting personally identifiable information.

Use up to date security software to protect you against virus and malware. Look out for and install updates to the operating system of your computer, cell phone, and/or tablet.

If you don't know the sender, check emails and attachments for viruses before opening or responding to them.

Read the privacy policies and check the privacy settings on SankalpSiksha products, and also other websites and social media sites, you use. Be aware of what information you are making publicly available and the options you have to restrict access to that information.

Please contact SankalpSiksha immediately if you have any concerns at sankalpsiksha@yahoo.com
